Executive Training Seminars (3 days, 6 hours per day)

Executive Training Seminars bring together scholars, practitioners, and members of the community at large. The goal is to combine academic and practical expertise with hands-on learning and knowledge transfer. This typically includes case-study sessions, role plays, scenario simulations, and group discussions. The format is highly interactive, cultivating dialogue and debate among participants of diverse but complementary backgrounds. Participants have included journalists, teachers, think-tank experts, policy-makers, corporate executives, and staff members of international institutions and nongovernmental organizations.
